Faatimah is a Flight Attendant who has seen and heard everything while flying the friendly skies. She's been married for 8 years and is the mother of a 7 year old son. She says marriage, like any other relationship requires work and patience.

She is a unique combination of Mexican, African American and Muslim. Her parents sent her to Catholic school though they were devote Muslims. They wanted her to be able to freely choose the religion of her choice.

God and Faith are extremely important to her. She says if people looked for the god within they'd be more likely to attract someone who is heavenly.

She wants women to be more realistic with their expectations. She get mad and thinks it's unfair when women want a man with a six pack, but won't go to the gym to work on themselves.

Faatimah is passionate about educating men and women about courtship. She's a firm believer that family is the key building block of strong communities, and without knowing how to cultivate loving relationships, we're all doomed.

She studies both the Bible and the Koran and teaches people on truth and principle. She says she doesn't sugar coat, because the truth is going to be a hard pill to swallow no matter how you serve it up.

Faatimah is a sweet gentle soul once you get to know her, but people often misjudge her because of how she looks and what she says. Her motto is, "No pain, no growth....so suck it up and learn!"
